10 Years of Defying the Norm

2021 marks a special year for Commune as we celebrate a decade of pushing the boundaries of furniture design. Let us stop, take a breather and rediscover the inspirations that have defined us and will continue to propel us to craft high quality artisanal works for the individual that aspires for the finer things in life.

Our lives have evolved at increasing pace, cities becoming busier and the world feels like it is spinning faster. Naturally we start to seek comfort in things that only nature can provide; a quiet solace, neutral oasis and awakening experiences that help reinvigorate and rediscover our zest for life.

Commune's designs are human-centric, with beauty and the needs of the modern individual as two essential considerations in its conceptualisation process. We aim to be the balance in a transient life, to provide calm whether you seek it in extravagance or in the quiet. Our collections feature designs from both ends of these spectrums, discover the new defying normal, discover the extraordinary.

—Aaron Draplin

I started from the idea to ‘defy the norm’, to do the unexpected, to create pieces that would have a personality and a story to tell.

Chief Design Officer, Julian Koh

Trained in industrial design in Melbourne, Julian Koh is the chief design officer of Commune. He heads Commune’s design lab, and is responsible for creating the look for Commune stores as well as scouring the region for home accessories to complement his brand’s furniture.

With a concept of what he calls “emotive design”, this inspired him to create Commune furniture stores as community-centred spaces. Julian sees value in designs that are timeless and which have greater longevity. He feels design is a passionate journey – a constant pursuit of tastefully curated creations. Commune’s designs are broadly categorised as minimalist, Scandinavian, and industrial modern. All incorporate common thematic elements so that the pieces can work with each other in a harmonious mix, with a contemporary, minimalist sensibility to timber that keeps Commune’s creations modern and homely.

Commune has since been the recipient of the Singapore Furniture Industry Awards’ “THE NEW ENTRANT AWARD – GOLD” and the SINGAPORE GOOD DESIGN (Lifestyle Division) award for its Dualtone collection in 2015.

A strange duality exists in the Volta collection, the brainchild of Commune's Chief Design Officer, Julian Koh.

At once packing both a refined elegance and a raw, grunge-like spirit, the solid walnut wood collection paired with leather and brass finishings reveals and celebrates both of these perspectives at once. In this edgy collection, the consumer will be able to enjoy glimpses of a standalone world that exists between both polar ends.

Similar relationships can be found throughout Julian's furniture designs: that of the industrial and the poetic, the temporary trend and the ever-permanent classic, or the retro and the contemporary. Commune is a complex litany of juxtapositions – an eclectic collection of different styles over time.

“At the time I started Commune, I was committed to the idea of creating furniture true to its namesake that would be at the heart of a cosy home-making experience – to show that harmonious contrasts are possible,” muses Julian. “Through designing furniture in different styles such as mid-century modern, Scandinavian, modern minimalist, and yet with a timeless universality that allows furniture from across the different collections to be easily mixed and matched, I was trying to show that even if multiple people in a home have different personalities or design tastes, they can come together and find something at Commune that will comfortably accommodate everyone.”

This means that Commune's aesthetic is never fixed, and is ever evolving. Julian is trained to keep his eye on the pulse of the international design world, and to seek inspiration from international design trends. But he doesn't stop there. He ventures beyond to look at youthful and popular movements in fashion, or digs deep into his nation's shared heritage, or feels the sharp evocations of nostalgia, travel, nature, his surroundings and emotions.

As Julian introduces the Volta collection against a moody, darkened interior filled stitching and use of leather is fashionable like those used on luxury bags.”

Volta's show of decadence and luxury in the choice of solid walnut wood and genuine leather glorifies individual opulence, looking utterly upmarket. As classic pieces with a contemporary edge, Volta is for the unconventional individual who enjoys the classy, sophisticated look in fashion, but also something provocative, unorthodox, and in-your-face – someone who is comfortable with the mix of both sides.

“I started from the idea to 'defy the norm', to do the unexpected, to create pieces that would have personality and a story to tell.

I wanted to create statement pieces that would stand out on their own. I wanted the Volta collection to feel like a star in its own right. So I was going for bold contrasts, I was thinking about what a rock musician's home might look like, and that added a rockstar edge in the design,” Julian adds. He introduces the sideboard, and tells tales about how the sideboard is inspired by his experience as a hobbyist musician and rock concert fan growing up, as it is designed to mimic a guitar amplifier. With its sound-absorbent fabric imported from Europe, Julian claims that when music is played in the environment it is placed in, the fabric will equally absorb the sound and start to vibrate along, creating the sense that the sideboard is musically alive – just like a guitar amplifier.

“The Volta sofa comes with interchangeable fabric and leather sides – in half-leather, half-fabric,” Julian explains as he walks over to a stylish chaise lounge and two-seater sofa, decked out with both a denim look and a posh natural brown leather. “I always wondered if furniture could be like fashion. We like so many different looks in fashion. Why can't we change what we want to wear when we feel like it, or when it's suitable? That's what I was thinking when I designed this – I wanted people to be able to change the sofa cushions according to their mood or climate – perhaps fabric for when they're feeling more casual and when the weather is with neon lights, funky photo collages, and chill-out house music, the boutique Volta collection looks like it would be right at home in both an industrial bachelor pad, or a swanky cocktail lounge. It best showcases Commune's continued evolution and coming-of-age process as a design brand. Embodying supreme confidence, Volta is all about the harmony of bold contrasts – showcasing bold creativity from opposing spectrums. Underlying the collection's sophistication is a raw and rebellious spirit.

We believe our furniture is like ‘art for the everyday’. Quality, well designed, artisanal woodcraft at affordable prices.

Incredibly nuanced, Julian talks about using radicalism and rebellion in both a strong yet subtle way. At a glance, Volta is about mixing rebellion with elegance, and downtown cool with uptown class. Walnut wood combines with elegant leather elements and brass accents for a surprisingly garage-chic look, proving that even the most industrial of looks can be refined. “Look at the ergonomics of the dining table,” Julian says as he goes over the smooth edges of the Volta dining table and its unique leather underside. “It's designed to be smooth, because I wanted it to be comfortable, and a tactile experience for whoever sits at the dining table.” He then points out the chairs. “Everything is designed to be light, and to look like it's floating, so that it's sophisticated. The legs are slim, perfectly shaped, and the chevron-patterned warm, and leather when they're feeling more luxe and when the weather is cooler,” Julian expresses earnestly.

I'm interested in Commune becoming a trend-setter, a brand that is thought-provoking, modern, energetic and culturally relevant.

These personal and imaginative touches mean that with Volta, you can embrace both the light and the dark sides; your home can look elegant yet rebellious at the same time. The collection is designed for those who are fun, young, daring and quirky.

“With Commune, it's always about creating a distinctive point of difference – establishing ourselves as an unconventional, international contemporary furniture and lifestyle brand. I'm interested in Commune becoming a trend-setter, a brand that is thought-provoking, modern, energetic and culturally relevant. So we have to do this by pushing the traditional boundaries of furniture design and how furniture is typically conceived,” Julian affirms.

With its daring and authentic designs such as Volta, Commune aims to position itself as a visionary brand, with a passion to deliver the extraordinary, on a fearless quest for innovation.

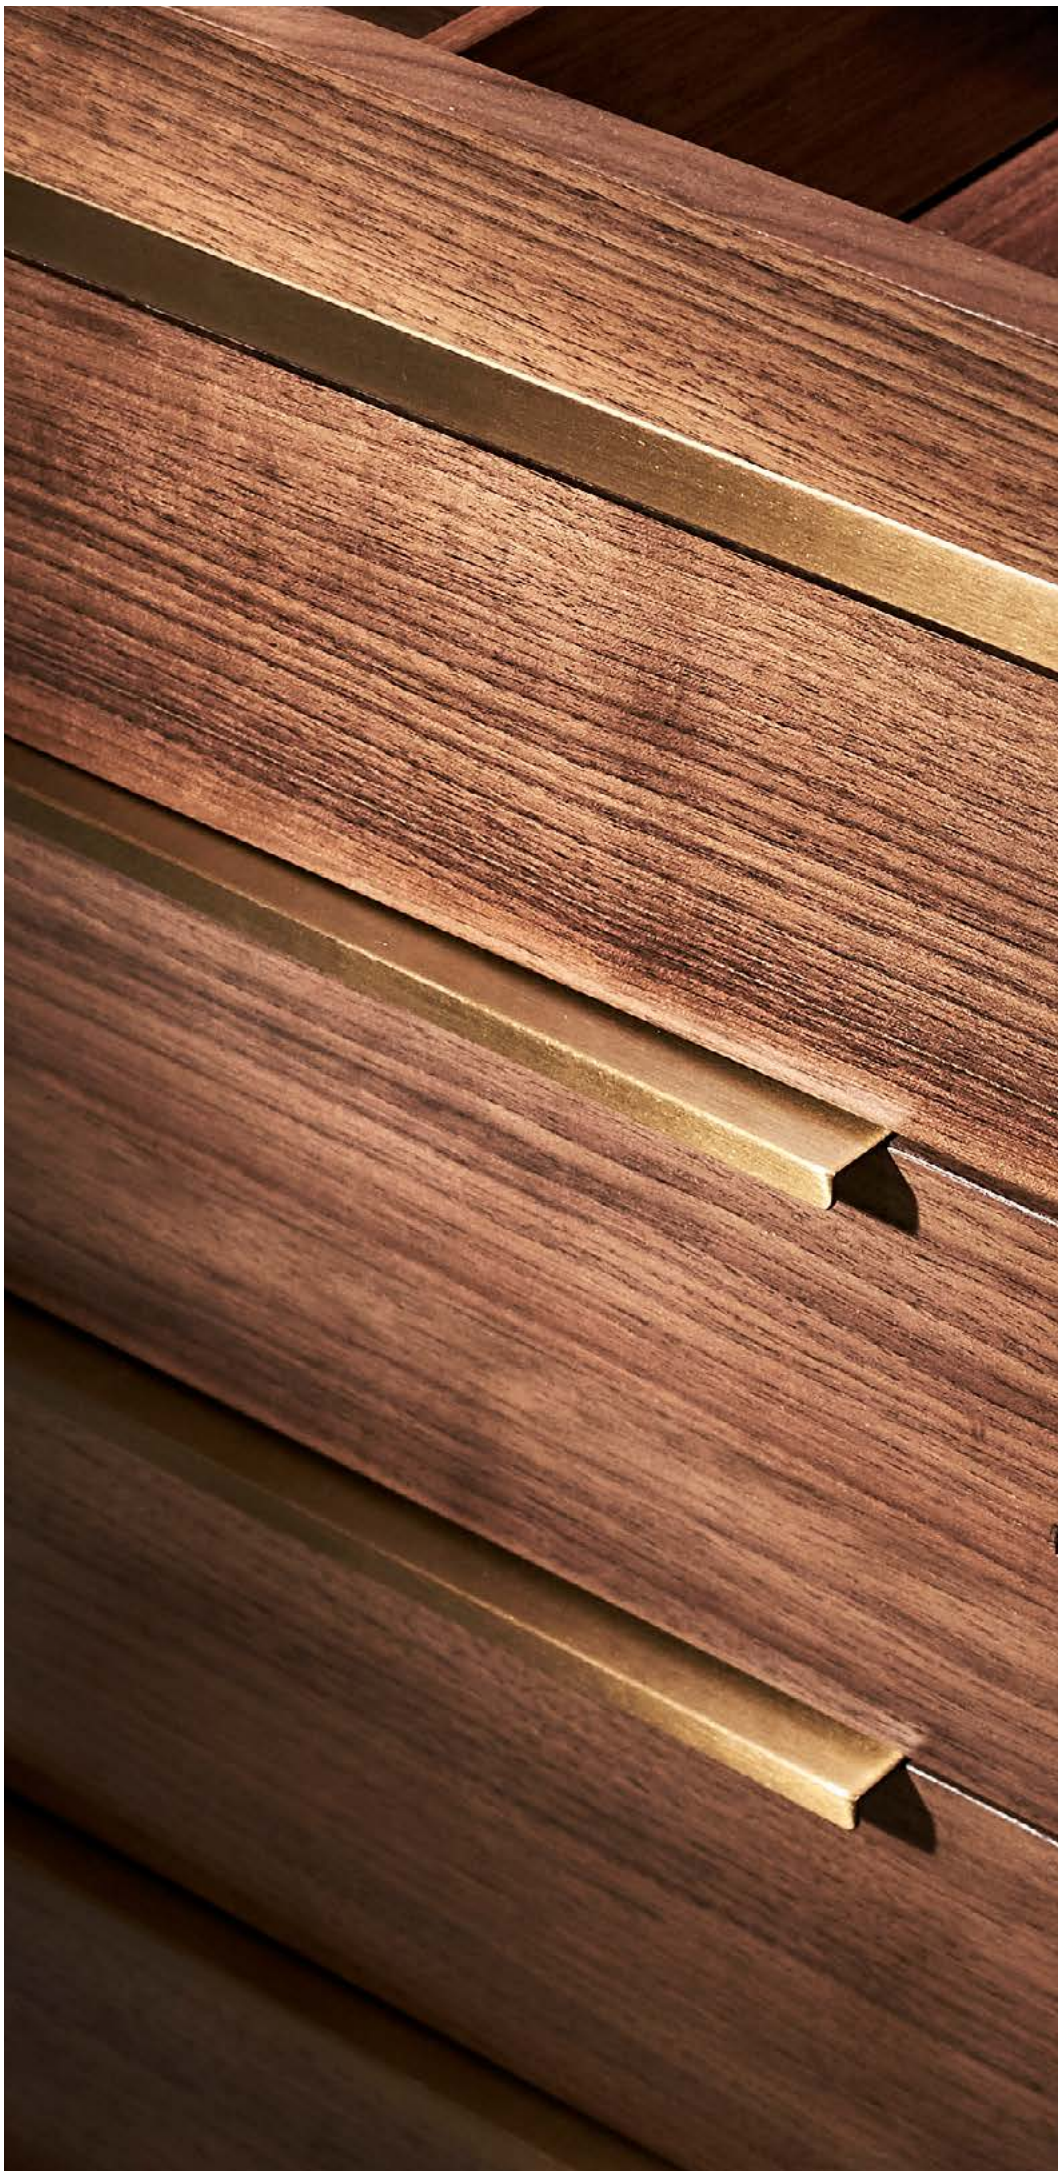

Behind the scenes

“We design with targeted personas in mind, designing products and environments that transport them to their desired dream escapade in their own home.”

“I devote most of my spare time keeping myself healthy and maintaining a clear state of mind through exercising and enjoying nature,” Gan Shee Wen, CMO and COO, ponders. His cousins, Julian Koh and Joshua Koh, Chief Design Officer and CEO respectively, chime in with similar responses. It comes as no surprise as the three founders chat about how they stay active outside of their work, and the time they spend with their families. After all, much of Commune’s designs and ideas have been driven by the contemporary, urban lifestyle, rather than ephemeral trends, over the last ten years since its conception.

The name of the brand says it all. Right from the beginning, Commune has always had a rich focus on human connections – cultivating friendships, family bonding, collaborative action. “We believe in designing for the people,” Julian muses. “The understanding of our users and demographics is at the core of our brand. We focus on functional art and design, bettering the lives of people and how people gather together.” As such, Commune’s designs over the past ten years have not been bound to any particular style or trend. Instead, the brand presents lifestyle products fine tuned to the modern consumers’ needs.

“We design with

“Commune is different from other furniture brands as we set ourselves as a lifestyle brand that not only focuses on furniture but any home related objects that fit our target audience’s lifestyle needs. We also don’t follow the usual design styles but rather, create collections that tell a story.” Every new collection only seeks to showcase Commune’s continued evolution and coming-of-age process as a design brand. To stay ahead of the game, inspiration is often sought from international design trends and even movements from the fashion industry.

But patience is a necessary virtue for the trendsetter. “Many a times, our designs are launched way ahead of trend,” Shee Wen explains. “We have experienced a collection that took 2 years before it caught the eyes of our customers and became popular.” Trends often tend to harbour short lifespans, but Commune has proven to exude a lasting elegance that surpasses both time and geography. Over the span of ten years, Commune has established a strong regional presence with a total of over 80 stores across Singapore, China, Malaysia, Philipinnes and Hong Kong. Last year, Commune dipped its toes into the European market by presenting at a Parisian trade fair. “I believe that we have created a unique brand with products that cater not only to a Singaporean or Asian audience but one that is suitable for any urban environment. Our strong design philosophy that has resulted in the development of our unique product offerings and unique retail concepts will give us a strong advantage to compete on the global stage,” observes Joshua. “We also focus on problems people face and hence provide solutions through well thought out designs that will enhance everyday life,” Julian adds. As Commune’s founders reflect back on the last ten years, I ask them if they have a favourite piece of furniture from the decade. Shee Wen and Joshua both agree on the Volta Side Chair. “We managed to pull off a chair that is both sexy as well as very comfortable and ergonomic. This is quite a feat!” As Chief Design Officer, Julian has a difficult time choosing amongst his designs. In the end, he concludes, “there’s no favourite as every design is a story of our process.”

Sustainability

It's time to relook how we buy things. In the midst of rapidly changing trends and styles, we often see beautiful, new, and shiny first without considering the work behind a product.

Whose hands are behind this, how were the materials harvested, where was this made?

We believe that times are changing – as more people care, and as more people ask, we present more than just elegant pieces of furniture.

At Commune, we believe in the unique human impact behind every product made, and we offer real stories meant to resound.

When you make a purchase at Commune, you are:

01 Nurturing authentic Asian creative talent by growing the design community's contributions to its local economies. All our sofas and wood furniture are original designs and manufactured in-house, in Asia.

02 Appreciating the fact that high-quality original design is the precious result of over 3,000 hours of thorough commitment and dedication to sourcing, research and development, market surveys, refinement, prototyping, product sampling, quality control checks and meticulous production.

03 Positively impacting the sustainable growth of a local community's livelihood. Our furniture is made in self-owned furniture factories in Asia, a workforce made up of over 2,000 skilled local artisans and craftsmen who specialise in authentic woodcraft.

04 Supporting the direct growth of local economies, where over 90% of which are made up of homegrown Small Medium Enterprises, just like Commune.

05 Supporting the sustainable development and positive footprint of the furniture industry, because we understand the industry's large-scale impact on the environment through its production and disposal processes. Hence, sustainability underpins everything we do – whether it's careful sourcing from sustainable forests, the usage of low-toxin materials in our production to keep our craftsmen and customers safe, regular up-cycling of products, or everyday business practices.

For a Greener Future

We’re deeply and intimately connected to the world around us. That’s why we spend a great amount of time and effort ensuring that sustainability is at the forefront of all we do, even if it means deliberately giving up profit margins to do so.

Not only are we ensuring the best practices for the environment, but also the cleanest way of living for everyday consumers.

With that in mind, here are a few considerations we make at Commune when our pieces are created:

Material

Furniture can be made from wood, rattan, metal, glass, leather and plastics. Solid wood products are made 100 percent from timber and not made with adhesives and resins or other chemical binders such as plastics or metal. The type of wood used is something you should also consider: is the solid wood a Softwood, such as Pine or Cedar — highly versatile and beautiful, these lumbers are perfect for structural, as well as interior and exterior designs applications. A very adaptable building material, it is to carve seamless and flowing forms, perfect for a statement piece. Wood such as the Cedar is also naturally rot resistant and with the proper care, can last up to 30 years or more.

Hardwood, such as Walnut, Maple or Oak — Offers the very best nature has to offer, from its denser cellular structure giving the timber incredible strength and toughness, the appearance of these lumbers are also very pleasing on the eye with their natural grains and colours, perfect for any contemporary living space.

While Commune uses metal, glass and premium leather or a combination of these alongside our main choice of Oak or Walnut to create unique furniture pieces, we also ensure that we apply our stringent, internally designed finishing process which is a minimum of 6-stages. When we use boards in our products, only boards that adhere to European standards, E1 and better (in compliance with the strict European standards on VOC emission) are used, ensuring that our pieces or not only sustainable for the environment but also, one of our top priority, your health.

Glues & Adhesives;
Stains, Paints &
Finishes

Most industrial glues contain formaldehyde, which is a known human carcinogen. You might be familiar with compressed boards and plywood that make use of glues to create a stable surface. As an international brand, Commune continues to adhere to strict and safe manufacturing standards upheld by factories around the world. As Commune’s factories also export to Europe, the U.K., the U.S. and Japan, our products meet strict, certified E1 standards by the European Emissions Standards on formaldehyde off-gassing emissions.

Our finishes use fewer harsh solvents and emit fewer volatile organic compounds (VOCs), which improves indoor air quality in factories and homes, while our paint is low in lead content, which can also typically be carcinogenic.

We also believe in up-cycling, and using reclaimed and recycled materials while restricting the use of harmful chemicals in our manufacturing processes.

Sustainability is no longer about being incrementally less bad, but it is about transformational change and making businesses fit for the 21st century and beyond. Commune believes in fully embracing the innovation and reinvention necessary for better and greener living.

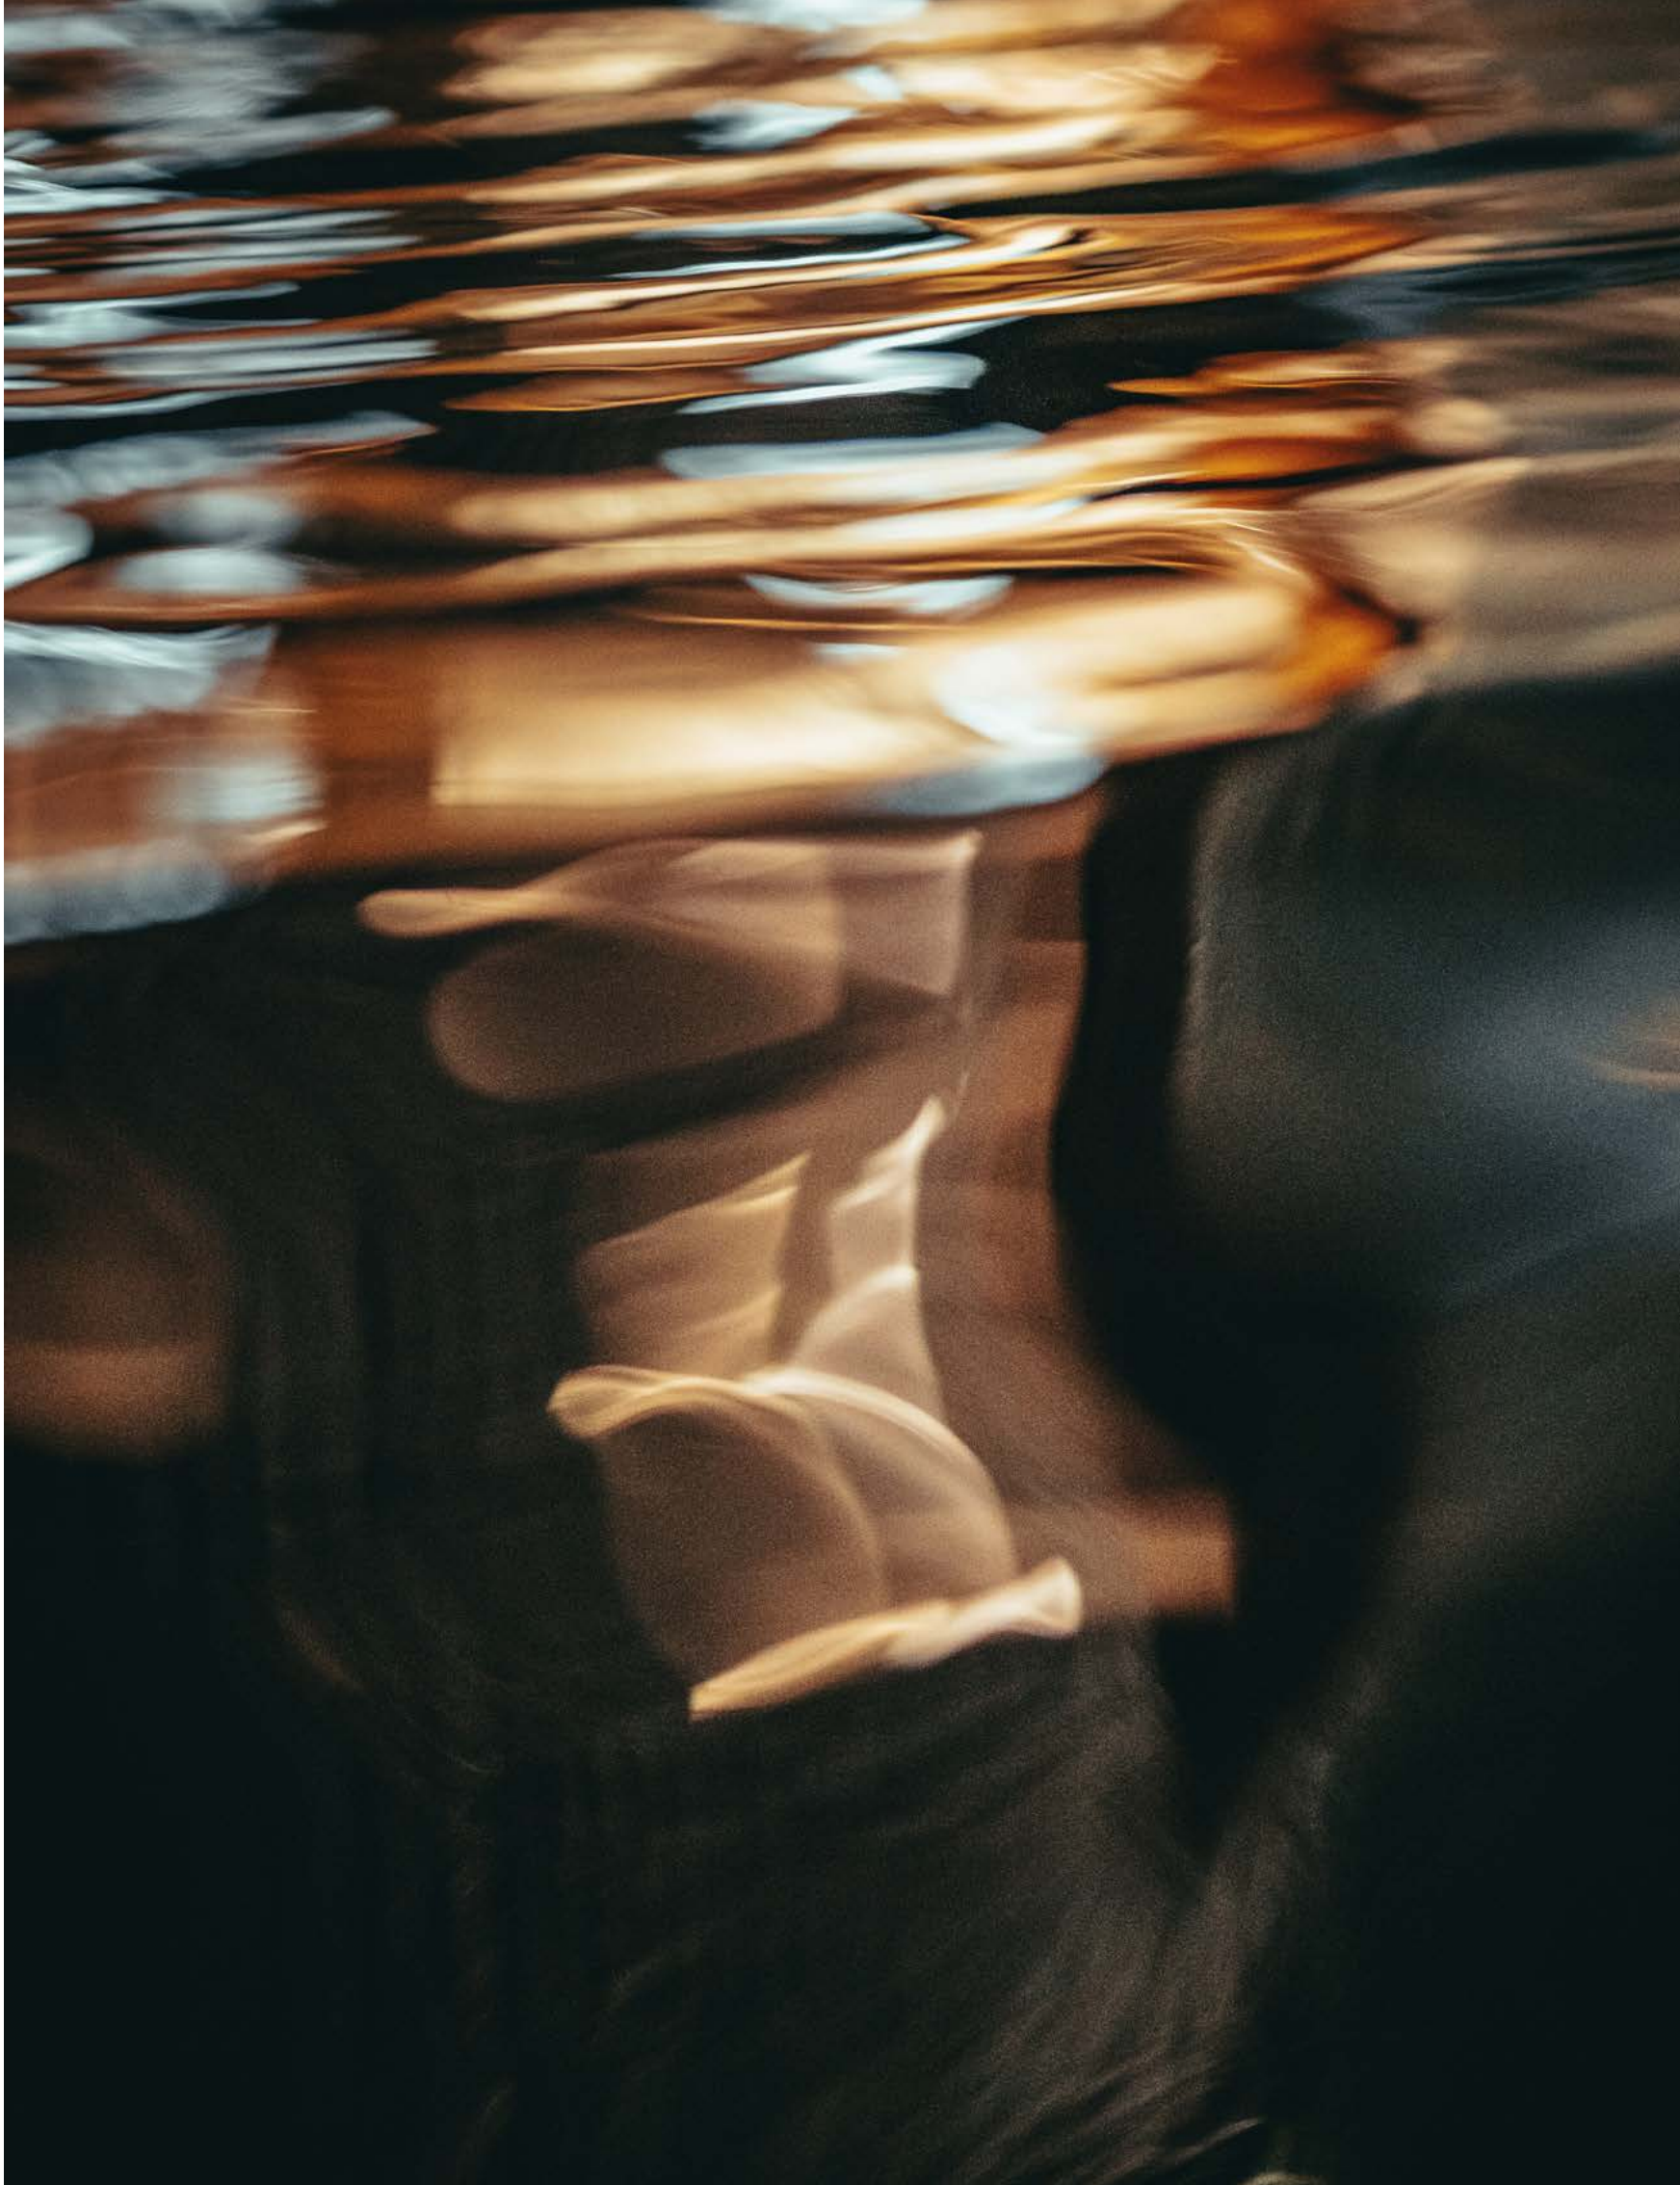

The future undeniably lies within the digital landscape. As more and more consumers choose to shop online, we began to embrace a wide array of up and coming digital tools as a leading furniture and lifestyle brand in the 21st century.

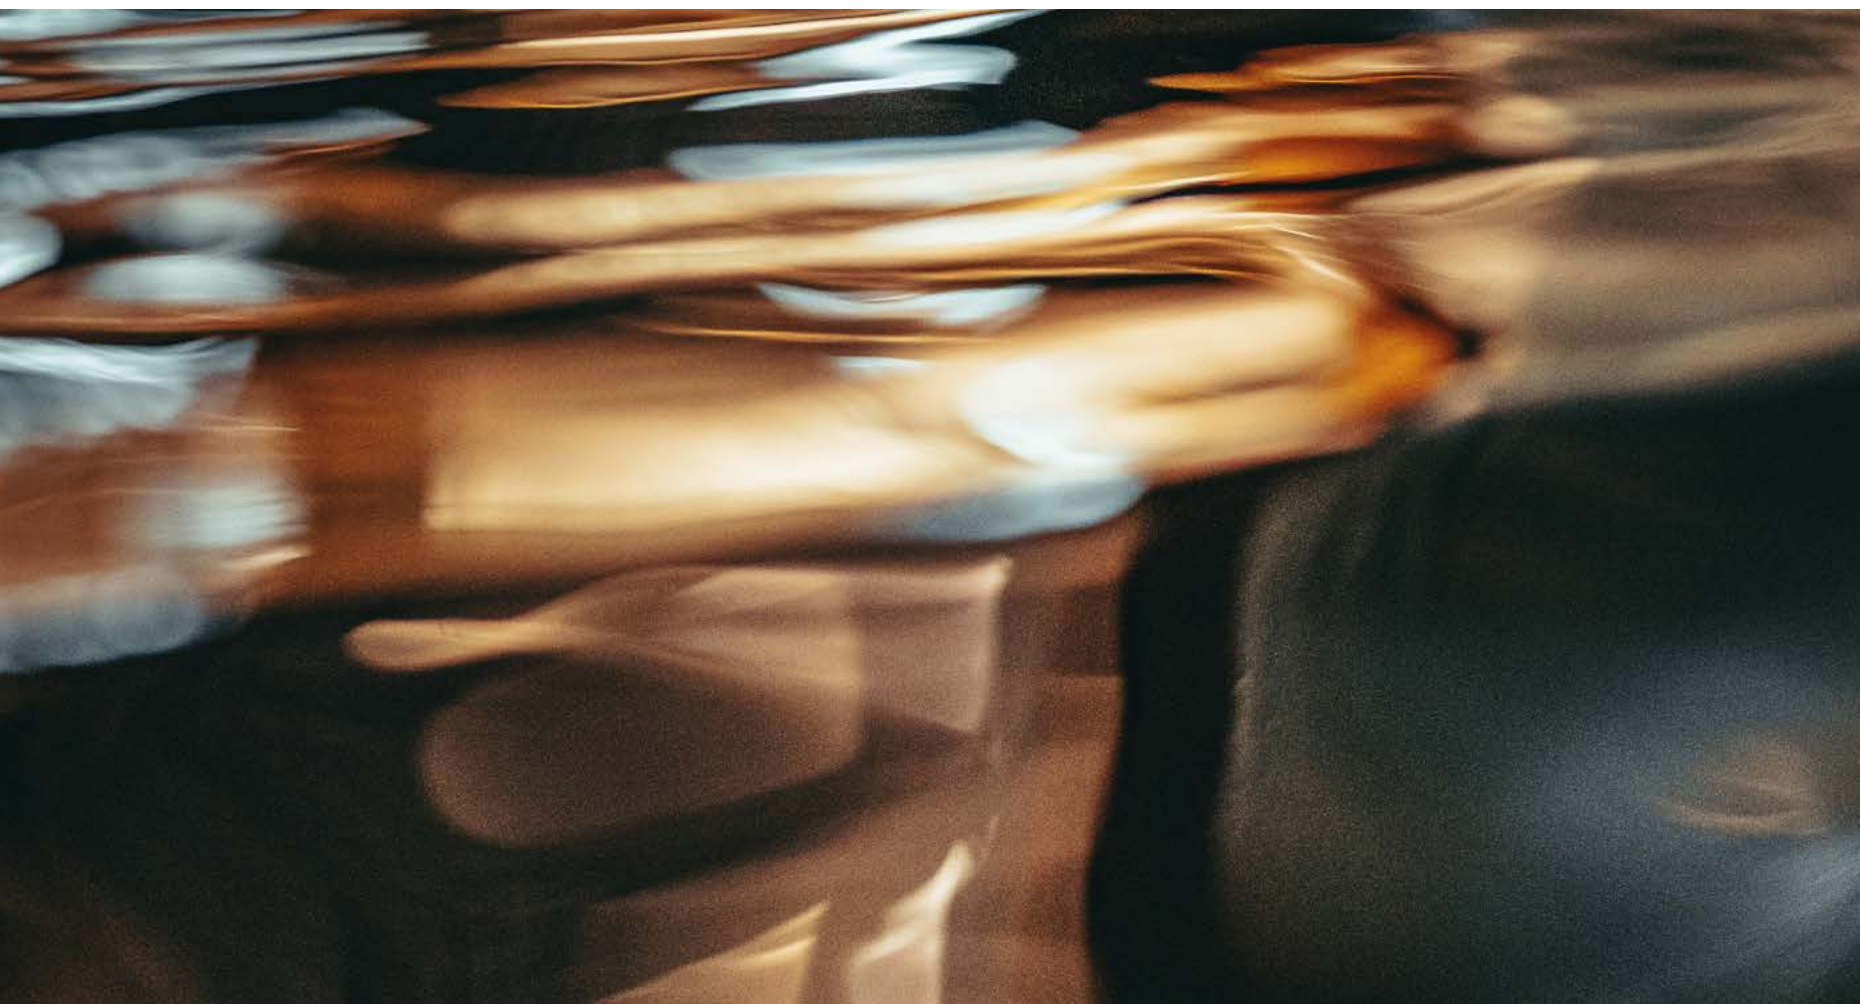

Commune

Shopping for your home is a highly personal and intimate experience - an expression of personal taste, aesthetic, and pragmatic preferences.

in Motion

While our brick-and-mortar stores still stand to serve you, we’ve also incorporated tech into our services to level up your experience.

- 1. Receive guided interior design consultation from our experts. Commune now offers onsite 3D draft planning and virtual reality tours through proposed interior designs at our Millenia Walk flagship store. You can even download the 3D drafts immediately and share them with your loved ones for extra opinion.
- 2. Experience the future of furniture shopping with Commune. Visualize how our pieces would look in your home before purchasing. Check out our state-of-the-art in-browser AR feature while browsing our products online.

Looking for something that fits your home? When you shop at Commune, you can:

- 3. Look up your favourite pieces online immediately. At Commune's stores, every product comes with a tag that has a QR code. Simply scan the QR code to find out more about the item's description and further details. While you're deciding between furniture items, add preferred items to cart online so that you can decide later.
- 4. Shop for furniture more efficiently. Commune's cloud-based customer relationship management (CRM) system, Commune: In Motion, utilises offline and online data gathered from your shopping and browsing behaviour to help you pick out what you would like more efficiently. Our experts in store will also use this data to assist you with recommendations, tips, and support more smoothly.

Crimson Writing Desk

First of it, it gives me a hint of nostalgia, reminiscing those years spending hours studying, and a table of this sort became my best companion during the high school and varsity times. The regionally available rubber wood used in the making of this desk well interprets that sturdy and sustainable wood, not necessarily has to be sourced elsewhere. It can just be right at your backyard.
