"An ecosystem of interrelated zones and settings that provide users with a range of spaces that support their various modes of work."

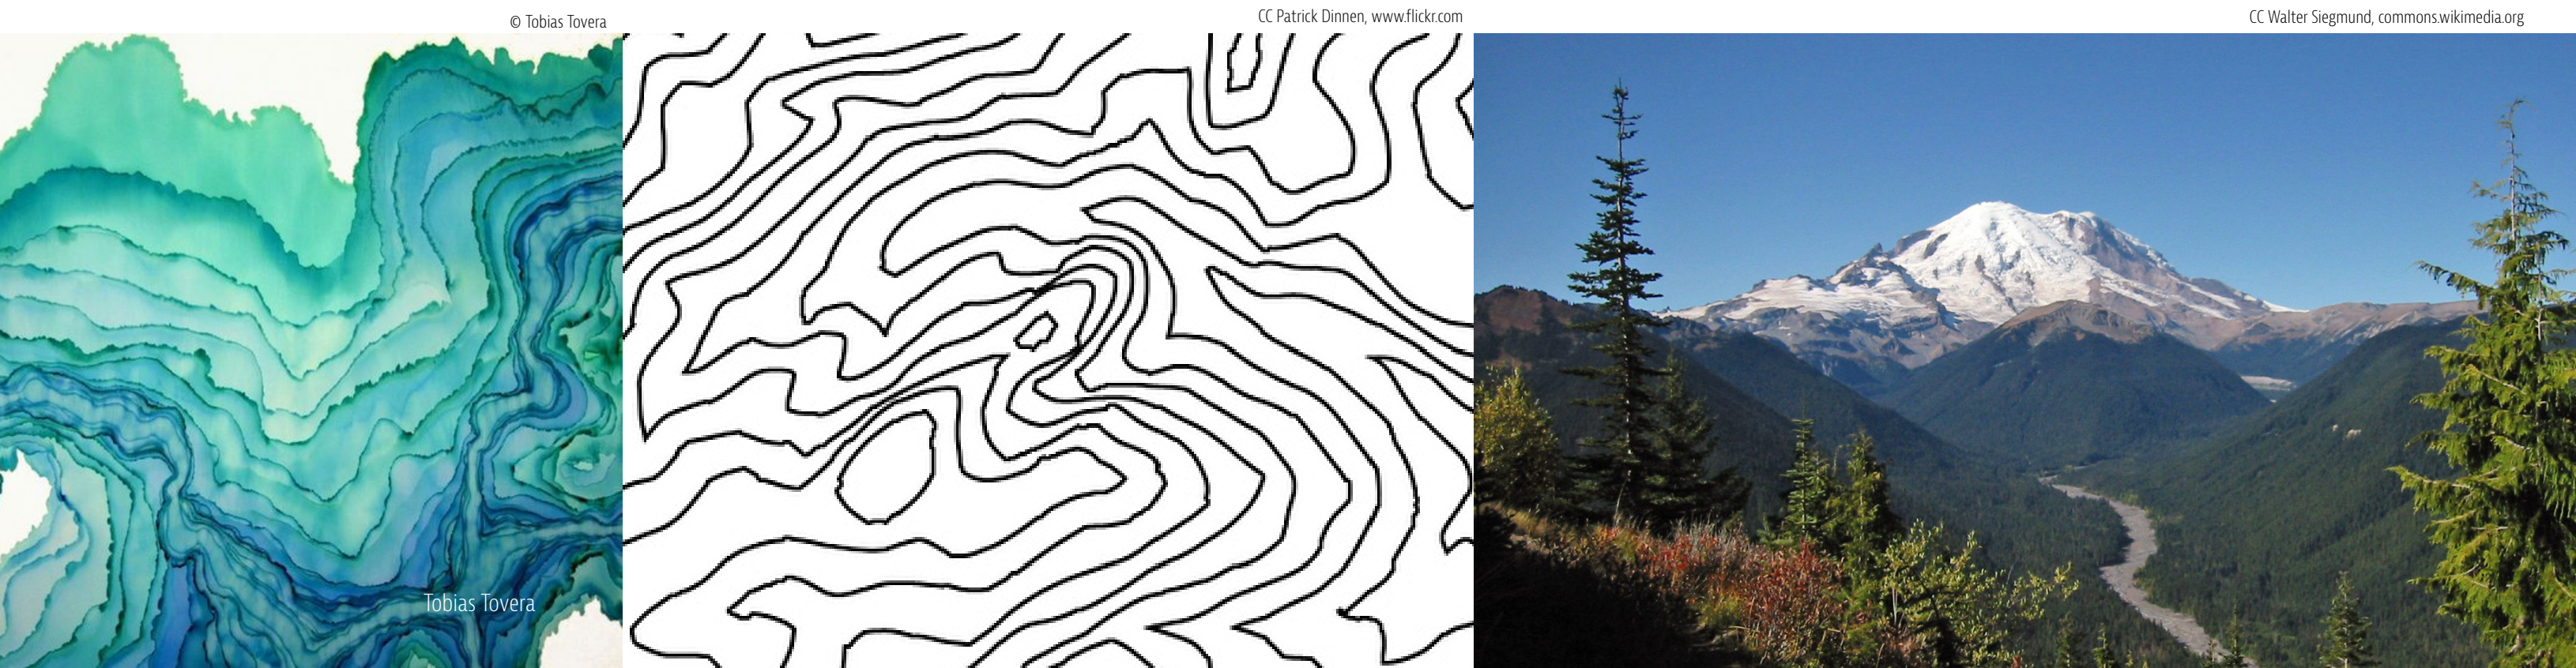

layers of the earth

The driving force behind the design of the NEXT medical office is inspired by the layers evident in a topographical map.

Topographical maps consist of various curvilinear forms that overlap to represent the different features of the Earth's surface.

Similarly, the design of NEXT integrates a diverse range of layers of space, each of which represents a different use. The arrangement of different work zones in the space occasionally overlap to allow for a variety of uses, similar to the way forms overlap in a topographical map. The design uses a variety of ceiling elements that replicate the curvilinear forms seen in topography.
