

Human Resources and Finance, Reimagined

A look at how Steelcase’s HR and finance teams changed their space, got creative and transformed the way they worked at the Learning + Innovation Center in Munich

In an era of digitalization and rapid disruption, creativity is more important than ever before.

Work is changing fast. As problems become more complex, the shift from process-driven to creative work is essential – especially for traditionally task-oriented teams like human resources and finance.

As Steelcase set out to build its first Learning + Innovation Center in Europe, the question was how do we build a space that unleashes creativity? A space that brings previously regional teams together and fosters innovation. A space that prepares our teams for tomorrow.
